WHAT IS CRYPTOCURRENCY

Cryptocurrency is a type of digital or virtual currency that uses cryptography for security and operates independently of any central authority, such as a government or financial institution. Unlike traditional currencies issued by governments (fiat currencies), cryptocurrencies rely on decentralized technology, typically a blockchain, to secure transactions, control the creation of new units, and verify the transfer of assets. The first and most well-known cryptocurrency is Bitcoin, which was created in 2009 by an anonymous person or group using the pseudonym Satoshi Nakamoto.

WHAT IS BLOCKCHAIN

Blockchain is a decentralized and distributed digital ledger technology that allows data to be securely and transparently recorded, shared, and maintained across a network of computers, known as nodes. It was initially designed to support cryptocurrencies like Bitcoin but has since found numerous other applications beyond digital currencies. The core concept of a blockchain revolves around creating a chain of blocks, where each block contains a list of transactions or data. Once a block is added to the chain, it is cryptographically linked to the previous block using a unique identifier, called a hash.

WHAT IS SMART CONTRACT

A smart contract is a self-executing digital contract with terms written in code, operating on a blockchain. By automating the execution and enforcement of predefined rules, smart contracts eliminate the need for intermediaries, increasing transparency and efficiency. Deployed on decentralized and distributed blockchain networks, they ensure trustless execution, immutability, and visibility of contract terms for all parties involved. Popularized on platforms like Ethereum, smart contracts have diverse applications across industries, revolutionizing processes in finance, supply chain management, real estate, and beyond, offering a secure and transparent alternative to traditional contractual agreements.
